Our generation has consumed more earthly resources in the past than any other generation that is likely to follow. Only 2 percent of the water in the world is drinkable at this point and it could be just as expensive as booze is in coming years due to climate changes and population growth. We might have a 100th year reunion where we will all come in wheel chairs wearing sun glasses and be taking mood changing drugs. Our future looks bright. Neil Golden

Graduated from Skyline in 64. Went to Chabot for one year. Then joined the Merchant Marine and traveled to Asia. After that, went into the Army. In 1968, I got out of the Army and went to work at GM in Fremont. I then went back to Chabot and finally graduated from Cal State Hayward in 1971 with a BS in business. Married in 1972 and have two children and two grandchildren. Married now for over 40 years and have lived in Lafayette since 1978. Sold my ownership in a business in 2010 and now retired. We spend our time hiking, biking, skiing, kayaking and traveling around the world. Plus spend time with the grandchildren. My grandchildren live in San Diego, so we have a second home in Carlsbad. John Briggs

First day in Port; Juneau. Trekked out to Mendenhall Glacier lookout....well almost....was 2 miles each way. I made it about 2/3 of the way before I turned around. Thank God for trekking sticks. I also did all the tourista stuff in downtown Juneau. What a beautiful city and beautiful weather.

Two days on very rough seas, so Ken, my balancing skills went well beyond your rubber foam.. We had huge swells. Felt like I was drunk, but I did not fall. The week before that, it was the sandy beach....so I'd say I've been staying in tune. Taking stairs when I can onboard ship. I did what I thought you would be "encouraging" me to do while I was away.

Beautiful weather today. Was able to see the towers on Mendenhall, and Lemon glacier. It's rare, because it usually rains here or is cloudy/foggy and hides those things. We are very fortunate.

Well, tomorrow is Skagway and we will be going on a bus up to Klondike Summit. We can only hope tomorrow matches today's for clear views from Klondike Peak's 3,100 altitude.

Have posted pictures on FB if we are friends, you will see them. Hopefully will turn out well.

News of the Girl Scout cabin burning down reminded me of the time I (like Doug Bartman) threw up out on the deck there, after eating too many giant gumdrops, but didn't make it to the railing... I think Melissa helped me clean up my sleeping bag).

That was the same place we called Cinderella Cabin , wasn't it? (or was it in Cinderella Canyon?) I didn't know the boys got to use the same cabin! Also remember the big round group sink, maybe with a foot pedal for turning on the faucets.

Ah, the good old days. Margaret Rait

You know, it's kinda funny me trying to connect with Skyline after all these years. The truth is that I didn't want to be there when I was. I had moved to Oakland from Walnut Creek less than a year before starting at Skyline and I felt estranged and distant. By my senior year I missed as much school as I could get away with. Did pretty ok academically but at one time Mrs. Fischer, the attendance lady admonished me with the statement that I had the worst attendance record of any student who had attended that wonderful institution so far. I am sure someone since has broken that record. see you next year Jamie

Malcolm Stuart Morrison June 11, 1947 - Aug. 9, 2013 Resident of San Francisco Malcolm Stuart Morrison, a genuine San Francisco architect, a decent and conservative man, and a beloved brother and friend to many, passed away on Friday, Aug. 9th, at the age of 66. Son of Dr. John G. and Mary Lou Morrison, he was reared in a loving home in the hills of Oakland, attended Skyline High School, and learned his profession at Cal Poly San Luis Obispo. Immediately after graduation, Mac began his career as a draftsman with the SF architecture firm of Lanier (Al) and Sherrill (Paul) Architects and Planners, and within three years became a named partner and lifelong friend of these two men and their families. Mac designed hundreds of residential and commercial structures around the Bay Area and Northern California. Architecture was his passion and attention to detail, function, and creative design were his handicraft. His work added significant value for his clients, many of whom blessed him with their repeat business over the years. Besides his work Mac loved golf, NFL football (49'ers), and was a family dominoes champion. One of six brothers he was preceded in death by brothers John K., Randolph C., and Douglas G. Morrison. He is survived by brothers Mark J. (Ginny) of Jacksonville, Florida, and Timothy B. Morrison of Richmond, California. His nieces and nephews, Emily Morrison Austin (Michael), John S. (Kristy), Samuel A., Christopher S. (Miran), and Scott A. Morrison (Jodi) loved him dearly and treasured his dry humor and friendship with "Uncle Mac". We know he is in good hands, likely assisting the Father of All to improve "space" for all the saints who have passed. In lieu of flowers the family asks that support be given to The Salvation Army in Malcolm's memory.

Skyline High School is known as the innovator of an event called Club Rush, in which all of the student organizations at Skyline High School gather on the Senior Quad during a 30-minute lunchtime period in order to recruit new members to join their ranks. This event has been going on ever since it came as a result of the efforts of student body president Jeffery K. James in 1964, and has been an annual occurrence ever since.

Skyline High School is also known for its annual homecoming festival, Titanpalooza, in which Skyline students, staff, and alumni all gather on the Senior Quad for a cornucopia of fun, food, and games. It is organized by the Skyline Leadership class, and generally takes place before the homecoming football game.

For those that “don’t remember”, Arch Horst was the fall president; Tom Simpson, the spring president.

It was historic for our parents; now us. sdc

OAKLAND, Calif. —

By Evan Borders - KTVU.com

Featuring stunning black-and-white photographs chronicling the original San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge and Golden Gate Bridge construction in the 1930s by American photographer Peter

Stackpole, the exhibition Peter Stackpole: Bridging the Bay continues OMCA's ongoing series exploring contemporary topics in California through photography.

On view in the Gallery of California Art, the exhibition of approximately 20 works from OMCA's collection connects visitors back in time to the bridge's first iteration.

The son of California sculptor Ralph Stackpole, Peter Stackpole was educated in the San Francisco Bay area and Paris, where he grew up under the influence of his parents' friends and peers such as Dorothea Lange, Edward Weston, and Diego Rivera. His appreciation for the hand-held camera and his technical expertise found a perfect subject chronicling the construction of both the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge and the Golden Gate Bridge.

An honorary member in the Bay Area's Group f/64, Stackpole's work appeared in Time, Fortune, U.S. Camera, Vanity Fair, and LIFE magazine, where he was an original staff photographer. (And his daughter, Anne, played flute along with Clare and I. sdc)

Health food store celebrates 80 years in Oakland
By Brittny Mejia Oakland Tribune 07/16/2013

OAKLAND -- Neighbors and businesses in the Laurel district have come and gone, but one store has remained a fixture in the community for 80 years.

In 1933, during the heart of the Depression, John Denis decided he would open a retail store and set up a mill operation in Oakland on a street known then as Hopkins. Although some things have changed at The Food Mill store, including the street name where it's located, the history remains.

"We stayed true to who we were, and everyone else kind of evolved to the commercial type of grocery store," said Kirk Watkins, owner of The Food Mill. "We have that old homey feel of a general store."

When Watkins began working at the store as a high school sophomore in 1969, he would package cookie bars in the upstairs bakery. The table where he worked still remains in the store, although only a couple of months ago he purchased a machine to help speed up the packing process.

The table is not the only remaining relic, as Watkins and employees still use old cash registers, as well as a peanut butter grinder and a roasting machine from when the store first opened. There is even a "museum" within the store that showcases the history of The Food Mill -- a history that Watkins said he plans to conserve for years to come.

"I just like the simple part of it all, and I think customers do too," Watkins said. "I think they enjoy coming in here and stepping back a little bit in time where things aren't so hurried."

The health food store celebrated 80 years on Saturday, with employees dressed in white shirts, black pants and aprons, to mirror employees in grocery stores back in the 1930s. There were food demos, lectures on breathing, movement and diet, face painting and massages.

Local vendors were also present to speak with community members and customers of The Food Mill. Michele LeProhn, owner of Communité Table, a prepared food business, is working out of the store's kitchen. She attended the Saturday celebration and provided samples to customers.

"It's a place I've shopped at weekly forever, so to be cooking out of here is just really special," LeProhn said. "I feel like we need more businesses in this neighborhood like this. I plan on living here a long time, and I always want to be able to come to The Food Mill."

Evelyn Harper has been shopping at The Food Mill for 40 years. Harper purchases different varieties of teas and supplements at the store, most of which she said she can't find elsewhere.

"The store has pretty much remained the same," Harper said. "I like it because it's familiar, and it's smaller, so you can get the attention you need."

The store provides a large bulk section, with almost 800 different items, including spices, flour and herbs. There are also consultants on staff seven days a week who offer free information to help guide customers with problems like diabetes, high cholesterol and arthritis, to name a few.

Although the store is small, it contains a pharmacy section, a grocery section and frozen foods, among other items. Eva Patton, who has been coming to The Food Mill for 15 years, said she refuses to move from the area primarily based on the store itself. Patton said the store serves as her pharmacy and grocery store and that she feels at home when she shops there.

"You're family when you come here," Patton said. "I come here, and I don't go anywhere else. I know how community-based they are, and they care about the customers in actions, not just words."

Some customers who frequent the store are known on a first-name basis, and Watkins said employees try and create a family feel. Watkins' own family has been involved with the store for as long as he can remember. His three brothers worked there as kids, and his two sons and his wife work there.

Despite customers' hopes that The Food Mill will expand, Watkins said he only plans on expanding within the store and continuing the store's focus on the community and its health.

"I just want to take care of my baby and leave it at that," Watkins said. "I just plan to continue to grow on this. It's all about giving to the community, and people like that."

From Kathy Costa Rocco

I received this email from a very long time friend and thought it worthy of sharing with you. Take a couple of minutes out of your busy schedule, read, and enjoy...

You know. . . time has a way of moving quickly and catching you unaware of the passing years. It seems just yesterday that I was young, just married and embarking on my new life with my mate. Yet in a way, it seems like eons ago, and I wonder where all the years went. I know that I lived them all. I have glimpses of how it was back then and of all my hopes and dreams.

But, here it is... the winter of my life and it catches me by surprise...How did I get here so fast? Where did the years go and where did my youth go? I remember well seeing older people through the years and thinking that those older people were years away from me and that winter was so far off that I could not fathom it or imagine fully what it would be like.

But, here it is...my friends are retiring and getting grey...they move slower and I see an older person now. Some are in better and some worse shape than me...but, I see the great change...Not like the ones that I remember who were young and vibrant...but, like me, their age is beginning to show and we are becoming those older folks that we used to see and never thought we'd be.

And so...now I enter into this new season of my life wanting to go and do things that I wish I had done but never did!! But, at least I know, that though the winter has come, and I'm not sure how long it will last...this I know, that when it's over on this earth...a new adventure will begin!

Yes, I have regrets. There are things I wish I had done better...things I should have done and there are many things I'm happy to have done. It's all in a lifetime.

So, if you're not in your winter yet...let me remind you, that it will be here faster than you think. So, whatever you would like to accomplish in your life please do it quickly! Don't put things off too long!! Life goes by way to fast...faster than you think. So, do what you can today, as you can never be sure whether this is your winter or not!

You have no promise that you will see all the seasons of your life...so, live for today and say all the things that you want your loved ones to remember... and hope that they appreciate and love you for all the things that you have done for them in all the years past!!

"Life" is a gift to you. The way you live your life is your gift to those who come after. Make it a fantastic one!

LIVE IT WELL! ENJOY TODAY!
DO SOMETHING FUN!
BE HAPPY !
HAVE A GREAT DAY!

Remember "It is health that is real wealth and not pieces of gold and silver.
LASTLY, CONSIDER THE FOLLOWING:
TODAY IS THE OLDEST YOU'VE EVER BEEN,
YET THE YOUNGEST YOU'LL EVER BE...
SO ENJOY THIS DAY WHILE IT LASTS.

~Your kids are becoming you.....but your grandchildren are perfect!
~Going out is good.. Coming home is better!
~You forget names.... But it's OK because other people forgot they even knew you!!!
~You sleep better on a lounge chair with the TV blaring than in bed. It's called "pre-sleep".
~You miss the days when everything worked with just an "ON" and "OFF" switch..
~You tend to use more 4 letter words ... "what?"..."when?" ... ???
~Now that you can afford expensive jewelry, it's not safe to wear it anywhere.
~What used to be freckles are now liver spots.
~Everybody whispers.
~But Old is good in some things: Old Songs, Old movies, and best of all, OLD FRIENDS!!

Stay well, my friend...

It's Not What You Gather, But What You Scatter That Tells What Kind Of Life You Have Lived.
Scatter well, my friend...
