It has been 4 years since I have moved up to the northwest. I must say that that this territory is absolutely fantastic! I am including some pictures of our home up here in the land of rain. Now, when I return to California to our cabin in Arnold I am amazed to see the brown climate that I took for granted all my life. It is so green up here and the rain that makes it possible does not bother me that much for the effect that we get to see every day from our home. We are in a small valley that gives us view of three fabulous mountains known as the Issaquah Alps. The mountains are Squak, which is directly to the north of us, Tiger mountain to the east (about 4500 ft. at its highest point), and Cougar Mountain to the west. We get some snow here, but not too much, and of course quite a bit of rain, but it's a very small price to pay for the incredibly green environment we have year round. We have rare occurrences of temperatures above 85 degrees. I have finally acclimated to this temperate forest environment and have found the California landscape so very brown and dry when we come to our cabin in Arnold during the summer season. All my life I took it for granted the California environment, feeling it was normal and not dry at all during the summer. Now, When it gets above 80 degrees, it seems so hot to me J ! , As you might recall, we have two grandsons, Atticus, now 9 and Sebastian, now 6. They were a big factor in the decision to move so far away from California. They have kept us quite busy these last 4 years. I purchased some woodworking shop tools soon after we got ourselves unpacked from the move and have done several projects as well as build various cabinets, carts, and a workbench to establish a shop environment. I will continue to do projects as time allows. Last Fall, I secured a job at Bellevue Community College to teach two entry level programming classes, C# and C++, in the Business and IT department. The following quarter I was requested to teach a Java class in the Computer Science department. It has taken a full 3 quarters to establish my presentation materials and routine. This past Spring quarter I taught the second quarter of the Java class sequence, so I now have four different classes in my repertoire. One of the classes, the C++ class, is fully online, and all four classes utilize a custom webpage development tool called Canvas to create a webpage for my students. It took some time to get the webpages designed, but now I simply can import from those classes into the next quarter classes with some tweaking of dates and presentation materials, which reduces my preparation time in between quarters substantially.

I am working at home for 8 weeks recovering from my complete hip surgery on the right side. My injury was 22 years ago and finally got it fixed. I am walking pretty well after only 5 1/2 weeks...amazing! I hope to be able to attend the festivities next year. Time will tell. Have a good fall. Judy Jenkins

Tom LaMarre has been a sportswriter and copy editor in California for parts of five decades, including 15 years with the Oakland Tribune and 22 with the Los Angeles Times. He was the Tribune's beat writer for the Oakland Raiders for seven seasons in the 1970s, highlighted by their 32-14 victory over the Minnesota Vikings in Super Bowl XI at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, and collaborated on a book, Winning Offensive Football, with quarterback Ken Stabler. He also covered the Oakland Athletics when they won three consecutive World Series in the 1970s and the Golden State Warriors when they won the NBA championship in 1974. With the Times, he wrote columns on golf, football and skiing.

He attended the University of San Francisco when the Dons were still a basketball power, and his golf idol growing up in Oakland was the late Tony Lema, who attended the same high school - St. Elizabeth's in Oakland. And then there was Skyline From

It is with deepest, heartfelt sadness that I convey to all of you the sad news that our dear alum, Terry Glass has died of cancer a couple of weeks ago. Ann Frank let me know and I wanted to ask everyone to pause a moment and think of or give a pray for Terry in remembrance.

Sadly, with Terry's death, his sister's and his Dads' death in these last few years, Terry's immediate family line is gone (I don't know if he had any other family members) but a close friend who you might drop a note to, via email if you are so inclined, is our fellow alum, Clouse (Claude) Sanders. ## Voyager 1 flies out of Solar System - on less power than an iPhone 5

By Damien Fletcher

13 Sep 2013 12:57

It has drifted beyond the bubble of hot gas from our Sun and now moving in the space between the stars

A NASA probe has become the first man-made object to travel beyond the Solar System, the American space agency revealed last night.

Scientists said that Voyager 1's instruments indicate it has drifted beyond the bubble of hot gas from our Sun and was now moving in the space between the stars.

And it's incredible feat was achieved on less power than an iPhone. The Voyager has reportedly less than 40KB of memory, whilst a 16GB iPhone 5 has 240,000 times that.

Professor Ed Stone, chief scientist on the mission, said: "This is really a key milestone that we'd been hoping we would reach when we started this project over 40 years ago - that we would get a spacecraft into interstellar space."

Launched in 1977, Voyager was sent initially to study the outer planets but it kept on going.

The veteran spacecraft is now almost 12 billion miles from home - so far away that it takes 17 hours for its radio signals to reach Earth.

Professor Stone added: "This is historic - one of those journeys of exploration like circumnavigating the globe for the first time or having a footprint on the Moon for the first time.

"This is the first time we've begun to explore the space between the stars."
